

Another great way to help with family finances – CTF Cashback

We're always looking for ideas to help families make the most of their finances, so we've developed a new website which allows them to earn cashback on the items they buy online.

How does it work?

It works by giving customers back a percentage of anything they spend. Whether they're shopping for clothes, holidays, toys, or home insurance - CTF cashback is an easy way to make the money go just that little bit further.

There are over a thousand online retailers for families to choose from – including many well-known high street brands, and many who offer products or services likely to be of particular interest to young families.

This way parents can buy the same items, on the same websites, at the same prices, as usual – but with the bonus of cashback on every item, plus many have additional voucher codes. And, because it costs nothing to sign up, and there aren't any yearly charges, all the cash can go back into the family budget.

Any cashback earned can go direct into one or more nominated UK current accounts – or, if they prefer, parents can use it to add to their child's CTF account with The Children's Mutual, or opt for a combination of the two. The money earned can be redeemed once a month, provided it's reached a minimum of £10 for each allocated account.

That's CTF cashback - another great way to help with family finances!
